Russian hockey instructor brings unique training to Burlington

By Steve Hogg, Post sports editor
January 4, 2012
It was just a coincidence that while Dr. Yasha Smushkin was commenting on the persistence of Canadian hockey yesterday, this country's current team had been eliminated hours earlier by the United States in the semifinal round of the world championship.

Sweden was edging the Russians for the other spot in the final as well.

The question put to the 42-year-old instructing legend from Russia was the difference he observed teaching Canadian players compared to the Swedes and Russians, he said at the press conference.

Smushkin was asked to describe the differences between the two groups. "I see a lack of..."
